If Luther thought the promoters would throw Smith overboard to accommodate him—well, he's even more consected than they say he is. But probably that isn't it at all. What is conceited than they say he is. But probably that isn't it at all. What is simpler than to follow Luther's course of reasoning. He has dodged until another boxer has been engaged instead. The other boxer has crossed the country to fulfill his contract. To "accept" the sout with Wells now is perfectly safe, absoause the promoters couldn't, with any show of decemps at all, turn the other man down and sign up the dilatory McCarty.
